ANDERSON, Ind., Aug. 9.-The residents of Anderson who live in the immediate vicinity of Twelfth-street crossing of the Big Four Railway were startled this morning shortly after 8 o'clock by sharp blasts from locomotives and as they rushed from their homes saw two engines come together head-on just south of the street crossing. The engines reared up for a moment and then settled down, the heavier train pushing the lighter down the track a short distance. Conductor Charles Black, with the regular Sunday morning train on the Michigan division of the Big Four from Wabash, was entering Anderson at a lively speed. His train had reached Eleventh street when Engineer Jennings, who was driving Engine 612, saw a freight train rounding a sharp curve at Fourteenth street. Emergency brakes were applied instantly and sharp blasts from the whistle warned the passengers that something was wrong. The sudden application of the air emergency brake threw many of the passengers from their seats. The big drive wheels whizzed round in their effort to stop and fire flew from the rails. The engine slowed down and was almost ready to back when the crash came.

The freight was in charge of Conductor Charles W. Edwards and was pulled by Engine 622. Robert Jackson, the oldest engineer on the division, was at the throttle and his nephew, A. P. Freymire, was acting as fireman, having been on the run but a week. Both crews jumped just before the engines came together and all escaped with slight wounds. The passengers were panic stricken for a moment and severai leaped from the train. The speed and weight of the freight train drove the pas-senger back almost a square. The pilot and front was broken off but later the engine was able to pull to the lower yards under its own steam Conductor Black gave his attention a once to the passengers and sent in a call for the company's physician. Several doctors soon responded. The noise was heard blocks and the word was soon spread that a wreck had occurred in the city. In a very short time hundreds of people were on the scene of the wreck. It was found that John Ryan, a traveling man of Warsaw, had received a bad cut over the right eye. It was four inches long went to the bone. The wound was bleeding profusely. When the crash came Ryan was thrown with great force against the edge of a door. The cut was stitched tinued on his way to Indianapolis. C. A. Michaels, of Marion, was thrown against the side of the car and the bones of his nose crushed. He was also bruised. H. W. Kelting in the same seat and both were thrown to the floor of the car. Their injuries are not serious, although painful. A number of others were bruised, but no one required further medical attention. Michaels was transferred and sent to his home in Marion by the interurban. The first car of the freight was occupied by W. E. Marks, who was taking a running mare to Fairmount for the races th week. The front of the car was smashed and the mare thrown to the floor. Marks was tossed to the rear end of the car an did not think he was hurt. Later, however suffered intensely and fainted. An an llance was called that took him to the nospital. His condition is serious. The front truck of the freight engine was derailed and a flat car in the middle of the train telescoped, derailing two other cars,

The wreckage was not cleared away till The blame is alleged to rest on Engineer Jackson, who has been in the service of the company twenty-five years, and on his conductor, Edwards. Their train was two ours late out of this city. It started from Greensburg and was to run through to Wabash. The orders were to pass the passenger train at Anderson. The passenger train is later on Sunday than other days. The freight pulled out of the Anderson yards without orders, the officers here say. it is reported that Engineer Jackson said he forgot all about the passenger train till he saw it after rounding the curve at Fourteenth street. His airbrake was defective, it having been leaking, and his train was running down grade and could not be

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. NEW ALBANY, Ind., Aug. 9.-Abraham Roudenbush, a prominent farmer of Harrison county, living near Elizabeth, was in the city to-day, arranging to go to the Pasteur Institute at Chicago, where he will undergo treatment for injuries received by being bitten by a horse that was suffering from hydrophobia. The muscles and flesh of his left forearm were badly torn and lacerated by the horse's teeth last Thursday. The wounds were cauterized at once by a physician at Elizabeth and Roudenbush came to this city to consult with local physicians. It was decided that he should leave at once for the Pasteur Institute The horse that attacked Roudenbush be came vicious a few days ago, frothed at the mouth, attempted to bite other animals and tore the skin from its forelegs. Roudenbush tried to throw an additional halter over the animal's head, and the horse him from the ground, shook him violently until his hold was loosened. Roudenbush states he does not fear any future effects of the attack, but will go to the institute at the request of his family and the phy-

TEDDY KENDALL IS STILL MYS-TERIOUSLY MISSING.

MARSEILLES, Aug. 9 .- As Premier Continued Efforts of Police and Citisens in Organized Search Prove Fruitless Yesterday.

CONDITION OF THE MOTHER

MRS. KENDALL'S LIFE DESPAIRED OF UNLESS BOY IS FOUND.

She Slept Last Night for First Time Since Friday-Detectives Running Down Clews.

In spite of the combined efforts of the po lice department and hundreds of citizens of Indianapolis to find Teddy Kendall, the three-year-old son of H. S. Kendall, No. 1626 Hall place, who disappeared from his home last Friday afternoon, the child is still as mysteriously missing as he was on the first day of his disappearance.

The condition of Mrs. Kendall, the mother, is critical in the extreme, and it is feared that she will die unless word from her child is had in the next day or so. Al last night a physician was at her side and anxlous friends and neighbors took turns order. in keeping watch over her almost unconscious form. Early this morning she slept a little for the first time since her boy was lost, but her sleep then was a broken one. Her moans and sobs brought tears to the eyes of those who attempt to console her with the hope that her child will be restored to her safe and well. She refuses to believe that her son will ever come back

All day yesterday the police and detectives searched for the missing lad, and every possible nook and cranny where he might have been secreted was searched. Private searching parties were formed with headquarters at the residence of Dr. Hornaday, 1636 Hall place, and up until 3 o'clock this morning the citizens of that neighborhood, formed in parties of eight and ten, scoured the city for miles around with absolutely no results. Mr. Kendall, with his neighbors and friends, has been untiring in his efforts to find trace of his boy, but last night dropped in a chair in his home exhausted, as he had not slept since Friday.

The entire city of Indianapolis was aroused yesterday, and hundreds of calls news centers. The police station was sieged by inquirers, and descriptions of the three-year-old boy were given out broad-cast by the clesk sergeant. Details of police there were very few children present. After worked last night on clews gathered during the day, but without results, and private citizens thronged the corridors of the police | hours of waiting, and it is computed that headquarters, all anxious to know it any news had been received of the lost child. Detectives Hauser and Kurtz, who have been working on the case since it was first brought to the attention of the police, said last night that they did not believe the child had been killed by a moral monster, as was suggested yesterday, and they are firm in their belief that the boy has been kidnaped by some person who maliciously desired to injure the Kendall family. They have several clews which they will investigate to-day, but promise nothing in the way of developments. Photographs of the child will be sen broadcast over the State to-day and the police in every city will be requested to make a search for the child. It is the belief of the police that the boy is being held either here or in a near-by town for the purpose of securing a reward for his return, but on account of the public attention that has been called to the case the person or persons who abducted the boy are afraid to bring him back. Superintendent Taffe, of the police de-partment, said last night that he had given instructions to every patrolman on the force to search every spot in the city for evidence that might lead to the finding of

One clew that is in the hands of the detective department will be followed today, and it is believed that it may prove fruitful. Detectives Hauser and Kurtz, find the boy, are in possession of the facts and have secured additional information, which at the present time they refuse to

On Friday afternoon J. W. Goens, an employe of the Big Four Railroad, was going to his home in a North Illinois street car and he said that a man who sat opposite him asked him where to get off in order to go to 1626 Hall place, which is the Kendall home. Mr. Goens stated that he was reading a paper at the time and did not notice the man particularly, but believed he could him. He directed the man to the place, he said, without looking up from his paper and thought no more of it until the next day when he read of the disappearance of the Kendall child. On hearing that the boy had not been found he hunted up the detectives and gave them the information and they are at the present time working on the information thus received. Whether it was a man who stole the child or a woman, is at the present time unknown, but in the opinion of Detectives Houser and Kurtz the man who inquired the way to the residence of Mr. Kendall played an important part in the mysterious disappearance of the little boy. When last seen by his mother the boy was running down the street. He turned into the yard of a neighbor who has a child about the same age. The two were play-mates, the mother said. The neighbor boy has a tricycle and little Teddy Kendall often went over to his home and rode the vehicle around on the sidewalk. Mr. Kendall stated to the detectives that with his child, who had walked to Sixhand to his home, where he greeted his delmatics. Another figure which evoked wife, who was waiting for him on porch. He then went inside the house, he

As the morning wore on the sun shone with all its southern intensity until it became unbearably hot, and the stones, columns and statues seemed to radiate the heat on the thousands waiting to enter the church. At 6 a. m. the ringing of bells aunounced the imminent opening of the doors and a commotion at once began among the crowd. But ten minutes had to elapse before the doors were opened and each seemed a century to the waiting crowd which for hours already had been standing before the closed portals. The police and Italian soldiers had a difficult task to maintain order as the crushing and fatigue had begun to tell on the patience of the people.

RUSH TO GET IN. When the doors were opened the inrush was terrific; many who started from the bottom of the steps outside were lifted off their feet and carried into the cathedral. It was a great human torrent let loose, thousands of people rushing, crushing and squeezing amid screams, protests, gesticulation and cries for help. But once in the whirlpool there was no escape, and the compactness of the crowd proved to be the safety of those caught in it. Women fainted in comparatively large numbers and even men were overcome by the heat, but no setheir entrance the people had further long the majority were on their feet altogether ten hours, five before the ceremony and an-

Those who received special invitations, including the high ecclesiastics, who were not participating in the procession, the diplomats and the Roman aristocracy, had a reserved entrance through the sacristy of St. Peter's. Prince Massimo arrived, accompanied by his daughter-in-law, Princess Beatrice, the daughter of Don Carlos, and they were given prominent seats. Duke Robert of Parma was the only other member of a royal family to attend. Just before entering the sedia gestatoria he Holiness would look better without them, he said: "I have no desire to appear what I am not," and, in fact, he wore them during the entire ceremony. The procession was a long time in getting under way, but afterwards as it moved through the magnificent halls and corridors of the Vatican it recalled former days when all was color and picturesqueness within the palace. The central figure in the long procession was Pius X. His heavy white robes and red and gold mitre were worn without an effort, making a vivid contrast to those memorable occasions on which Pope Leo XIII wore them, for Leo seemed always unable to support their weight. Over the Pontiff's head a canopy was held by eight men, while the historic ostrich-feather fans with peacock tips gave a touch of barbaric splendor to Western eyes. Surrounding Pope Plus were the Noble Guard in new red uniforms and gleaming helmets and carrying drawn swords, while in front marched the cardinals, a gorgeous bit of color with many handsome faces home on Friday afternoon and among them, the cardinal bishops in their teenth street to meet him, went hand in ables and the cardinal deacons in their

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. LAFAYETTE, Ind., Aug. 9.-M. W. Scheibl, a cigar maker, whose home is Louisville, Ky., but who has worked in Logansport, was killed early this morning by an east-bound passenger train at the overhead bridge south of this city. This afternoon Thomas Brant, of Elston, who was known to have been with Scheibl yesterday, was arrested with a union card and other things in his possession belonging to the dead man. Brant says he knew Scheibl eight years ago, and has not seen him since. He says he was passing the bridge, which is near his home, an hour after the accident, and found the card and other things. Brant also picked up the heart and pieces of the skull of the victim and turned them over to the undertaker, who had other parts of mangled anatomy. Scheibl came to this city yesterday and drew $4 from the local union. The police say the money was spent in company with Brant. The chief of police suspects foul play, but Brant strenuously denies having been in company with Scheibl. The case will be probed to-morrow. Relatives of the dead man wired for the body, and it was sent South at midnight.

Must Be Protected, but There

Must Be No Delay.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Aug. 9.-In a letter, the publication of which was authorized to-day, President Roosevelt, under date of Aug. 6, commends Governor Winfield T. Durbin, of Indiana, for the attitude he assumed recently respecting lynching. The President also embraces the opportunity to express his own views in reference to lynching and mob violence generally, pointing out that mob violence is merely one form of anarchy and that anarchy is the forerunner of tyranny. The President vigorously urges that the penalty for that crime which most frequently induces a resort to lynching shall be applied swiftly and surely, but by due process of the courts, so that it may be demonstrated "that the law

ernor Durbin follows: "Permit me to thank you as an American citizen for the admirable way in which you have vindicated the majesty of the law by your recent action in reference to lynching feel, my dear sir, that you have made all men your debtors who believe, as all far-seeing men must, that the well-being indeed, the very existence, of the Repul depends upon that spirit of orderly liberty under the law which is as incompatible with mob violence as with any form of despotism. Of course, mob violence is simply one form of anarchy, and anarchy is now, as it always has been, the handmalden and forerunner of tyranny. "I feel that you have not only reflected honor upon the State which, for its good fortune hes you as its chief executive, but upon the whole Nation. It is incumbent upon every man throughout this country not only to hold up your hands in the course you have been following, but to show his realization that the matter is one of vital

"All thoughtful men must feel the gravest alarm over the growth of lynching in this country, and especially over the peculiarly hideous forms so often taken by mob violence when colored men are the victims-on which occasions the mob seems to lay most weight, not on the crime, but on the color of the criminal. In a certain proportion of these cases the man lynched has been guilty of a crime horrible beyond description; a crime so horrible that as far as he himself is concerned he has forfeiter the right to any kind of sympathy what-soever. The feeling of all good citizens that such a hideous crime shall not be hideously punished by mob violence is due not in the least to sympathy for the criminal, but to a very lively sense of the train of dreadful consequences which follow the course taken by the mob in exacting inhuman vengeance for an inhuman wrong. In such cases moreover, it is well to remember that the criminal not merely sins against humanity in inexplicable and unpardonable fashion. but sins particularly against his own race and does them a wrong far greater than any white man can possibly do them. Therefore, in such cases the colored people throughout the land should in every possible way show their belief that they, more than all others in the community, are horrified at the commission of such a crime and are peculiarly concerned in taking every possible measure to prevent its recurrence and to bring the criminal to immediate justice. The slightest lack of vigor either in denunciation of the crime or in bringing the criminal to justice is itself unpardonable. JUSTICE SHOULD BE SWIFT. "Moreover, every effort should be made under the law to expedite the proceedings of justice in the case of such an awful crime. But it cannot be necessary in order to accomplish this to deprive any citizen of those fundamental rights to be heard in his own defense which are so dear to us all and which lie at the root of our liberty. It certainly ought to be possible, by the proper administration of the laws, to secure swift vengeance upon the criminal; and the best and immediate efforts of all legislators. judges and citizens should be addressed to securing such reforms in our legal procedare as to leave no vestige of excuse for those misguided men who undertake to reap vengeance through violent methods. "Men who have been guilty of a crime like rape or murder should be visited with swift and certain punishment and the just effort made by the courts to protect them in their rights should under no circumstances be perverted into permitting any mere technicality to avert or delay their punishment. The substantial rights of the prisoner to a fair trial must, of course, be guaranteed, as you have so justly insisted that they should be; but, subject to this guarantee, the law must work swiftly and surely, and all the agents of the law should realize the wrong they do when they permit justice to be delayed or thwarted for technical or insufficient reasons. We must show that the law is adequate to deal with crime by freeing it from every vestige of technicality and delay. "But the fullest recognition of the horror of the crime and the most complete lack of sympathy with the criminal cannot in the least diminish our horror at the way in which it has become customary to avenge these crimes and at the consequences that are already proceeding therefrom. It is of course inevitable that where vengeance is taken by a mob it should frequently light on innocent people, and the wrong done in such a case to the individual is one for which there is no remedy. But even where the real criminal is reached the wrong done by the mob to the community itself is wel nigh as great. Especially is this true where the lynching is accompanied with torture. There are certain hideous sights which when once seen can never be wholly erased from the mental retina. The mere fact of having seen them implies mental degradation. This is a thousandfold stronger when, instead of merely seeing the deed, the man has participated in it. Whoever in any part of our country has ever taken part in lawlessly putting to death a criminal by the dreadful torture of fire must forever after have the awful spectacle of his own handiwork seared into his brain and soul. He can never again be the same man SPREAD OF THE EVIL "This matter of lynching would be a terrible thing even if it stopped with the lynching of men guilty of the inhuman and hideous crime of rape; but as a matter of fact, lawlessness of this type never does stop and never can stop in such fashion. Every violent man in the community is
